EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Impact7G, Inc. (Impact7G) was contracted by the City of Euharlee, in partnership with the Georgia Department of Community Affairs, Historic Preservation Division (HPD), to complete Phase I of a community-wide historic resources survey of historic properties within the city limit. Historic resources are recognized as those constructed in 1984 or before (40 years of age or older). Such properties were documented in the field and survey descriptions entered into Georgia's Natural, Archaeological, and Historic Resource Geographic Information System (GNAHRGIS) database.

Several resources within the city limits of Euharlee were surveyed in 1990 and later recorded in GNAHRGIS. Euharlee is located within the Etowah Valley Historic District, which was designated on the National Register of Historic Places in 1975. The City of Euharlee boasts a rich history dating back to the 1830s when it was settled around several mills. First named Burge's Mill, it was chartered in 1852 as Euharleyville, and finally Euharlee in 1870. The downtown district of Euharlee is a quaint village with an exceptional collection of well-preserved historic resources including ruins of the mill, a militia courthouse and calaboose, two antebellum churches with cemeteries, and an African American burial ground, among many other notable historic resources that document the rich heritage of Euharlee. The Etowah River played a pivotal role in the settlement of this area, traveling through the heart of the village. Crossing the river, the Euharlee Covered Bridge survives as one of the oldest remaining covered bridges in the state. The historic resources and natural landscape of the village create a quaint, picturesque sense of place and convey the rich heritage of Euharlee from the 1830s through the turn-of-the-20th century.

In addition to the village of Euharlee, the greater city limit was surveyed as part of this community-wide initiative. The City initially identified six specific groupings of properties in which to conduct the intensive-level survey. In consultation with the City and HPD, it was agreed that should these groupings, or neighborhoods, not contain the contract estimate of approximately 155 historic resources, Impact7G would conduct a desktop review and windshield survey throughout the corporate limits to identify additional resources meeting the 40-year age requirement. Impact7G recorded a total of 228 properties within the city. Among those, a total of 20 GNAHRGIS entries were updated, including 5 that are no longer extant. An additional 124 GNAHRGIS records were newly created (total of 144 GNAHRGIS entries associated with this survey).

SECTION 1. PROJECT DESCRIPTION

Initiated by the City of Euharlee and the Georgia Historic Preservation Division (HPD), this historic resource study was funded as part of an effort to survey properties 40 years of age or older ("historic resource") within the corporate limits of Euharlee, Bartow County, Georgia. The City of Euharlee has made significant strides in recent years to document and preserve its historic built environment. This study is Phase I of a community-wide initiative to produce a complete inventory of historic resources within the corporate limits, establish priorities for preservation, and to set a framework for future planning efforts. In July of 2023, the City contracted Impact7G, Inc. (Impact7G) to complete the Phase I survey of an approximate 155 historic resources. The survey was financed, in part, with funds from the National Park Service, U.S. Department of the Interior, through the state-level administration of the Georgia Department of Community Affairs, Historic Preservation Division (HPD) and matched with funds from the City of Euharlee.

As a community-wide survey, the "survey area" encompasses the entirety of the corporate limits. At the onset of the project, the City identified six (6) groupings of potential historic properties where preference was given for an intensive-level survey. In consultation with HPD and the City, it was agreed that should these concentrated areas, or sections, contain less than the contract agreement of approximately 155 historic resources, Impact7G would conduct a windshield survey throughout the city limits (survey area) to identify additional historic resources to document and survey. Figures 1 and 2 are locational maps of Euharlee and the six pre-defined sections where the survey was concentrated. Figure 2 also shows locations of all surveyed properties associated with this project.

Preliminary research of the survey area was conducted prior to fieldwork. Dates of construction of resources throughout the city limits were determined by an analysis of architectural types, styles and materials, as well as through a review of Bartow County property records and historic aerial photography. The requirement for resource documentation and entry into GNAHRGIS was an age of 40 years or older, which made 1984 the construction cutoff date.

Fieldwork was conducted in multiple phases from July of 2023 through January 2024 by Secretary of Interior-qualified Architectural Historians Jaime Destefano and Casey Radke. The field survey was conducted in accordance with the survey guidelines of the HPD. An intensive-level survey was initially conducted within the six pre-defined sections, or neighborhoods. The data gathered in the field was entered into GNAHRGIS. When applicable, resurveyed properties were updated with current data. In many instances, the locations of resurveyed properties were corrected in GNAHRGIS. New GNAHRGIS entries were created for the remaining properties erected on or before 1984. The initial survey confirmed that nearly 90 resources within the six predefined sections are less than 40 years of age. To reach an approximate 155 surveyed properties per the contract, Impact7G conducted a subsequent windshield survey along all accessible roads within the city limits to identify and document additional historic properties.

A total of 223 resources ranging in date from c.1830 to 2023 were documented. Among those, 56 are between 40 and 49 years of age (erected 1975-1984), and 83 resources are 50 years of age or older (built prior to 1975). A total of 84, or approximately 38 percent (38%), of all documented resources are less than 40 years of age and not entered into GNAHRGIS. Impact7G identified 20 resources that were previously entered into GNAHRGIS (Table 1). The majority were initially recorded as part of a survey conducted in 1990-1991, and the survey data later entered into GNAHRGIS through the University of Georgia FindIt Historic Resource Survey Partnership. Based on a desktop review and fieldwork, Impact7G confirmed that 5 of the previously entered resources are demolished and noted as such in GNAHRGIS. A total of 124 new records were created, and the existing 20 records updated in GNAHRGIS (total 144 GNAHRGIS entries tied to this survey). Figure 2 shows distribution of the 144-surveyed properties associated with this study.

Appendix A contains all survey maps, including those with the GNAHRGIS ID labeled. Appendix B is a table listing all GNARHGIS ID numbers associated with this survey. Though not an element required by HPD, Impact7G prepared a detailed survey inventory spreadsheet that includes all resources within the survey area, regardless of age. The spreadsheet is beneficial for future planning initiatives and includes such data as address, parcel, GNAHRGIS number, building type, style, date of construction, and integrity, etc. The spreadsheet is provided as Appendix C.

SECTION 2. SUMMARY OF PREVIOUS PRESERVATION PROJECTS

In 1975, the Etowah Valley Historic District was designated to the National Register and encompasses more than 40,000 acres in Bartow and Floyd Counties. It is the second largest historic district in Georgia. The nomination of the district includes three “significant” resources located within Euharlee – the Euharlee Covered Bridge, and the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches.<sup>1</sup> In 1990-1991, a countywide survey was conducted to identify and document noteworthy historic resources throughout Bartow County. Twenty (20) historic properties within Euharlee were documented as part of the study and later entered in GNAHRGIS.

The Euharlee Historical Society was established in 1997 and has since spearheaded a tremendous preservation campaign in and around Euharlee. The City of Euharlee is a Certified Local Government (CLG). The CLG program is administered by the National Park Service through the Georgia Historic Preservation Division. This title affords the city greater benefits for preservation information and funding. The Euharlee Downtown Historic District is locally-designated and encompasses the historic core of Euharlee including extant resources surviving from the early settlement period through the early-20th century. Established in the 1970s, the Historic Preservation Commission ensures the continuity of the historic aesthetic of downtown Euharlee and its historic resources. The HPC hears and decides requests for Certificate of Appropriateness submitted by owners of properties within the district.

Virtually forgotten and overgrown by the 1990s, the Euharlee Historical Society, the Etowah Valley Historical Society (EVHS), and the City of Euharlee undertook the task of clearing the Black Pioneer Cemetery in Euharlee. EVHS member, Carl Etheridge, conducted an archaeological investigation to determine the location of graves in the cemetery. Using dowsing rods and probes, over three hundred graves were found. In 2002, the Euharlee Historical Society erected a marker in memory of the hundreds of those buried there.<sup>2</sup>

Since the formation of the HPC in the 1970s, and in more recent years, the City of Euharlee began acquiring buildings within the downtown district to protect and preserve including the Burges-Lowry Mill, the covered bridge, granary, courthouse and calaboose, among others in the core of the district. The City has also preserved threatened historic resources by relocating them to the Euharlee Historic District. Among those include a cow shed once located on the Lowry farm and renovated in 1997, serving as the Euharlee History Museum until 2007. Interpretative signage throughout the district shares the long history of Euharlee from the early-1800s.

Euharlee takes great pride in one of its most significant treasures – the Euharlee Covered Bridge (formerly Lowry Bridge). In 1996, the City of Euharlee received a $200,000.00 grant from state and federal funds to restore the cherished bridge. Built in 1886, it is not only a local landmark but bears statewide significance as the oldest extant covered bridge in the state, and a work of a master bridge builder and African American, Washington King.

Most recently, the Cartersville-Bartow County Convention & Visitors Bureau established the Bartow County African American Trail. The county boasts a rich African American heritage and culture since the 1830s, and the Trail documents some of the most significant properties associated with the African American experience in Bartow County. Two sites within Euharlee are part of the Trail – the Euharlee Covered Bridge and the Black Pioneers Cemetery.<sup>3</sup>

SECTION 3. DEVELOPMENTAL HISTORY

3.1 Bartow County

Bartow County is situated in northwest Georgia, about 30 miles northwest of the state capital in Atlanta. Nestled at the juncture of the Euharlee Creek and Etowah River, the charming village of Euharlee is approximately 8 miles southwest of Cartersville, the county seat. Bartow County boasts an extraordinary history, long pre-dating the arrival of Europeans. Abundant natural resources, particularly the Etowah River and its fertile plains, attracted Native populations for thousands of years including Woodland Indians, Mississippi Mound Builders, Creek and Cherokees. The Etowah Indian Mounds survive as a remembrance of these cultures. The discovery of gold in north Georgia in 1828 led to the cessation of Native territory and the subsequent Georgia Land Lottery of 1832. In 1838, the remaining Native peoples in the region were forcibly removed in what is memorialized as the Trail of Tears.

Bartow County was formed in 1832 as Cass County, with Cassville elected as the county seat. Early settlers flocked to the newly formed county, many establishing water-powered mills on the banks of the Etowah River and its many tributaries. The fertile soil made the region particularly suitable for an agrarian economy with farmers producing tobacco, corn, wheat and cotton. The county also boasted an early mining industry.<sup>4</sup> An expansive iron belt running north to south through the county supported a flourishing iron industry from the 1840s to the 1870s. The Civil War slowed economic growth, and the county faced numerous skirmishes, particularly in the vicinity of Kingston and Cassville. The latter was destroyed by Union forces in 1864. The following year, the last remaining Confederate army east of the Mississippi was paroled at Kingston. In 1867, the county seat was relocated to its present location at Cartersville.<sup>5</sup>

Residents of Bartow County endured tremendous postwar hardship. Transportation networks were in a state of despair and a high percentage of farm property damaged. Several consecutive years of crop failure made it further difficult to recover economically.<sup>6</sup> Slowly, the county's economy rebounded and transportation networks improved. The coming of the Dixie Highway, and later Interstate 75, greatly impacted the agricultural economy as increased automobile ownerships allowed for farmers to more efficiently transport goods. Agricultural diversification steered away from reliance on cotton. Peach orchards, textile factories, and barite and ochre mining flourished. While agriculture continues to play an important role to the county's economy, the natural landscape of Bartow County has attracted tourism and water recreation enthusiasts. A push in recent years to recognize the long history of the County and its many significant historic resources also generates heritage tourism. Among its many gems is the town of Euharlee, nestled at the confluence of Euharlee Creek and the Etowah River.

3.2 Burge's Mill: Antebellum Euharlee

Attracted by the Etowah River and its source of waterpower, as well as the rich fertile land of the valley, early settlers arrived at the future site of Euharlee shortly after the 1832 land lottery. In 1835, there were ten registered voters. Among the early settlers was Nathaniel Burge, who arrived in 1837 after amassing 800 acres along the river and Euharlee Creek.<sup>7</sup> Burge established various mills along the creek including a large grist mill (GNAHRGIS 289079) alongside an existing wagon road known as the Rome Road. Adjacent to Burge's Mill, a bridge crossed the Euharlee Creek (later covered bridge built in 1886) along the road. Southeast of Burge's Mill, another crossing (bridge or ferry) along the Rome Road crossed the Etowah River (presently Milam Bridge; GNAHRGIS 1540). Southwest of <sup>7</sup> Two burial markers in the present Euharlee Baptist Church cemetery (GNAHRGIS 290474) suggest that this area may have settled as early as 1818; though, they may be later reinternments.

Burge's Mill, Roger's Mill (later Auchmutedy, today Tilley Mill; GNAHRGIS 290548) was operating as early as 1848. Here, a wagon bridge, today known as Hardin Bridge, crossed Euharlee Creek along a road extending north from Alabama Road to Euharlee. The three early bridges provided a network of wagon roads accessing the numerous mills that supported burgeoning agriculture in the region. A traveler's well (GNAHRGIS 289095) was hand-dug by settlers at Burge's Mill to accommodate a steady increase in traffic crossing Euharlee Creek.<sup>8</sup> A map of the state of Georgia in 1838 depicts the location of Burge's Mill and the approximate path of the Rome Road (Figure 4).<sup>9</sup> The map does not show the road along which Hardin Bridge would later be built in 1848.

Cotton was the major cash crop in the Etowah River valley. As early as 1840, an account book of F.C. Bailey records the purchase of hand-picked cotton and ginning with Dan Lowry at the site of the present covered bridge.<sup>10</sup> Records indicate that Burges sold the mill and surrounding acreage in the years leading up to the Civil War. East of the mill, In 1859, a covered bridge was built along Rome Road crossing the Etowah River and named for Madison Milam, local landowner who also ran a ferry here.

During the early years of settlement, a courthouse (GNAHRGIS 1548) was built in Euharlee in the 851st Militia District as early as 1837 when the first Euharlee Justice of Peace, Absolam Stephens, Jr., presided.<sup>11</sup> The Mount Paran Church was formed, and a sanctuary built in 1852 (renamed Euharlee Baptist Church c.1890; GNAHRGIS 1557). By 1850, the population of the community, which likely included the surrounding rural areas, reached nearly 2,300, including 577 enslaved peoples, and 2 freed people of color.<sup>12</sup> The rapid boom in population growth subsequently led to the incorporation of Burge's Mill as Euharleyville on January 12, 1852. The first town commissioners were Thomas W. Brandon, E.B. Presley, Leonard Morgan, Allen Dykes and B.D. Dykes. The following year, the Euharlee Presbyterian Church (GNAHRGIS 1554) was established, and Mount Paran Baptist Church started the first school in the village, named the Mount Paran Academy (not extant). The schoolhouse was built between the two churches.<sup>13</sup> Around 1850, a Masonic Lodge was chartered as Euharlee Lodge #97.<sup>14</sup>

Both the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches had cemeteries within the church grounds. As with many cemeteries throughout the southeast, the churches did not permit burials of its African American congregants. Prior to the Civil War, enslaved members of the two churches were interred within a one-acre tract situated between the churches, most without markers. Following emancipation, African American residents of Euharlee continued to be buried here through the early-20th century. The cemetery was forgotten, and the burials covered by overgrown vegetation. Following an archaeological investigation of the cemetery in the 1990s, 333 burials were discovered, though only two were identified: Het Powell and a local man named Jim Scott. Het Powell is known to have been born into slavery in 1830, brought to Euharlee with slaveholder, Mrs. Meek Powell. She came with her husband,

Johnson, and three of her four children. Her son, Lee, was reportedly sold to a different slaveholder. Following the Civil War, Het worked as a midwife and housekeeper.<sup>15</sup>Therefore, a separate burial ground was established between the two churches. The cemetery (GNAHRGIS 290464) contributes to the awareness of the African American heritage and experience in Bartow County is a one-acre burial ground situated between the Presbyterian and Baptist Churches. Today, the cemetery is named the Black Pioneers Cemetery and survives as a substantial resource in Euharlee that documents the African American experience and heritage.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, Euharleyville was a thriving community in the region boasting multiple mills accessible by wagon roads, a village with churches, cemeteries, mills, cotton gins, stores and a courthouse. War halted growth and development in and around Euharlee, ultimately resulting in a dramatic decline in population. In May of 1864, Harrison's Brigade retreated through Euharlee, burning the Milam Bridge crossing the Etowah River (Figure 5).<sup>16</sup> A ferry operated in its place until 1912 when a replacement bridge was erected. According to local legend, a bridge crossing the Euharlee Creek southwest of town was crossed by Sherman and his 111,000 troops from the Cumberland Army. It is also reported that Sherman set up camp near the bridge, adjacent to Roger's Mill (later Auchmutey Mill, today Tilley Mill).<sup>17</sup>

3.2 Euharlee from Reconstruction through World War II

Bartow County was devastated in the years following the War. The population had plummeted, agricultural fields destroyed, and mills and industries largely abandoned. In 1864, Daniel Lowry arrived at Euharlee, amassing large tracts of land, and even taking over the Burge's Mill. His son, Dan Jr. joined his father in 1870, and together, they accumulated over two thousand acres of land within and around Euharlee. The Lowry's farmed considerable acreage, while also operating a grist mill, flour mill and cotton gin.<sup>18</sup>

On September 16, 1870, the town was renamed and incorporated as Euharlee, with the Mount Paran Academy located at its center and renamed the Euharlee School. The population struggled to rebound following the War. By 1880, Euharlee had only 160 residents. Though, signs of revitalization were evident by the turn-of-the-20th century. The Euharlee School was destroyed by fire in 1891, students forced to attend classes in homes of Euharlee residents. A new school was erected in 1896, at which time it was named Euharlee Presbyterian Institute.<sup>19</sup> The new school was two-story and had adjacent dormitories. The school served the community for the next 18 years before being acquired by the county and renaming the former institute the Bartow Rural High School.<sup>20</sup>

By the late-1880s, three general stores are known to be operating in Euharlee, including the Euharlee Mercantile, which was originally constructed in the 1860s. The Mercantile (GNAHRGIS 1547) was damaged by fire in 1887, and later rebuilt that year. The center of the store is believed to be part of the original building. The store has been in almost continual operation since its reconstruction, with several operators including E.G. Nelson, Tom Tumlin, Thomas Taylor and Will Taylor.<sup>21</sup> It briefly served as a community post office. The Euharlee Commissary (GNAHRGIS 290515), also believed to originally have been built in the 1860s, served as a store where large landowners offered tenants an opportunity to buy supplies on credit until their crops sold. A blacksmith shop (GNAHRGIS 1546) was built by Jim Lowry in the 1880s. It was one of several operating in Euharlee through the 1900s. Blacksmith shops were vital to supporting area farmers. The Lowry blacksmith shop operated until the 1950s.<sup>22</sup>

Photograph 6. Euharlee Covered Bridge (GNAHRGIS 1549), 2023

Built in 1886, the Euharlee Covered Bridge (GNAHRGIS 1549) is the most recognizable landmark in Euharlee. It is the third bridge crossing the Euharlee Creek at Euharlee, the previous structures destroyed by floods. The bridge spans 138 feet and is a town-lattice style structure built to withstand heavy loads and is high enough to avoid flooding. The foundation of local stone was embedded deep into the creek bed, and the pine timber trusses secured with wooden pegs. The bridge was erected by Washington W. King, son of famed bridge builder, Horace King, and resident Jonathan H. Burke. Washington King's mother was born a free person of color; however, his father, Horace, was enslaved at the time of Washington's birth in the early 1840s in Alabama. Like his mother, Washington was born a free person of color. Prior to the Civil War, he ran pole-boats on the Chattahoochee River. He cut timber and his father taught him the bridge building trade. Following the War, he and his siblings joined their father in the King Brothers Bridge Company. By 1875, Washington established a firm in Atlanta, continuing to build with his family. Washington and his family erected many bridges throughout the state including the bridge at Stone Mountain. In 1886, he and Jonathan Burke erected the covered bridge over the Etowah River in Euharlee. Washington King had a prolific career, several of his bridges remain intact.<sup>23</sup> The Euharlee Covered Bridge survives as one of the oldest covered bridges in Georgia. It is site #14 on the Bartow County African American Trail and is recognized as a “significant” site in the Etowah Valley Historic District.

While the Euharlee Baptist and Presbyterian Churches were the principal community churches dating to the early years of settlement, west of the downtown district, the Corinth Baptist Church was organized in 1896 on Cliff Nelson Road. At the turn-of-the-20th century, the church built its first sanctuary, which was later also used as a school for the black children in the community. The children attended school here until 1938 when Bartow County consolidated all schools. The congregation remains active in the community.<sup>24</sup>

During the early-20th century, transportation improvements allowed for a new bridge crossing at Rogers Mill in 1903. The new truss bridge (GNAHRGIS 1702) was named Hardin Bridge, and the north-south route named Hardin Bridge Road. Having been destroyed by retreating Confederate armies in 1864, and subsequently the site of a ferry, the Milam Bridge crossing the Etowah River was finally replaced in 1912. Figure 6 is an 1890 map showing the locations of the bridges and what was then the Milam Ferry.

In 1903, having been inactive for some time, the Masonic Lodge was reorganized and chartered as Euharlee Lodge #457 in 1903, joining the Bartow County Masonic Convention in 1904.<sup>25</sup> It is plausible that the Lodge erected its two-story meeting hall on Covered Bridge Road shortly thereafter (GNAHRGIS 1561). A topographic map of 1909 illustrates the general setting and built landscape in downtown Euharlee and the surrounding area (Figure 7). As depicted, downtown contained a scattering of buildings primarily fronting the Covered Bridge Road. The surrounding area, however, remained largely undeveloped farmland, with homesites generally situated near the roads. The natural and built landscape of Euharlee and the surrounding agricultural community would remain largely unchanged through the post-World War II years.

Euharlee passed the days as a quaint village, primarily serving surrounding farming families, though a small number of families resided in town. Never reaching population numbers seen before the Civil War. Through the Depression years and World War II, Euharlee was the heart of the agricultural community, offering essential services and goods to farmers; and community institutions including churches, schools, and a social meeting hall. Euharlee was a social center for families to come together and was the center of life for the surrounding community.

3.3 Post-World War II Euharlee

Following World War II, increased automobile ownership, coupled with an improved transportation system, allowed for longer commutes, particularly to the state capital at Atlanta. Farming was in decline throughout the county, as those returning from war often sought employment opportunities in larger cities. Large farms were frequently subdivided, many sold to developers for the establishment of planned residential subdivisions. While much of Bartow County was experiencing significant population growth and suburbanization, Euharlee was largely bypassed, its quiet and idyllic appeal enduring.

Within the heart of Euharlee, little change was made to the built landscape and picturesque aesthetic following World War II. The Baptist and Presbyterian churches were updated and expanded, and in 1958, the Corinth Baptist Church on Cliff Nelson Road built a new church edifice (GNARHGIS 290417). Since the mid-20th century, the three churches received multiple additions and upgrades. In 1952, the Bartow Rural High School (formerly the Euharlee Presbyterian Institute) was razed to make way for a new elementary school. The new International Style building (GNAHGIS 290416) housed the Euharlee Consolidated School until closing in 1960. It subsequently housed the City Hall.

Euharlee's population remained low by 1970 with a mere 65 residents. However, this would soon change due to a multitude of factors, particularly the development of the nearby Georgia Power's Plant Bowen, and the inevitable suburbanization of metro Atlanta. Plans for a massive power plant just outside the town limits of Euharlee were underway by the mid-1960s. Georgia Power, having secured upwards of 1,000 acres of primarily farmland, began construction of the facility by the close of the 1960s, with the first unit in operation in 1971. Additional units were subsequently added in 1972, 1974 and 1975. When construction initially began, one resident recalls only about 25 houses located within a 2-mile radius of the plant.<sup>26</sup> The massive power plant, with four colossal cooling towers dramatically changed the landscape southeast of Euharlee. Planned subdivisions quickly developed within the vicinity of Plant Bowen, extending into the city limits of Euharlee. With the opening of the Plant Bowen, increased traffic and heavy loads passed through the Euharlee Covered Bridge and Milam Bridge daily, threatening the structural integrity of both. By the close of the 1970s, a new concrete bridge was built across Euharlee Creek and the Etowah River, and in 1978, the two historic bridges permanently closed to traffic. Figures 8 and 9 illustrate the rapid development in and around Euharlee from 1971 through 2007.

By 1971, the landscape in and around downtown Euharlee remained relatively unchanged since depicted on the 1909 topographic map. Much of the area was undeveloped woodlands and cleared agricultural fields. Downtown Euharlee was characterized by the community buildings fronting Covered Bridge Road, yet on either side of this downtown district, the land remained undeveloped. Southeast of the city limits, the beginnings of Plant Bowen is evident in the 1971 aerial photograph. Ten years later, again little changed save for the expansion of the power plant. In 1971, the Etowah Subdivision was laid out on land owned by A.R. Dobson. Dobson Road, extending from the north side of Milam Bridge Road, appears built in the aerial imagery that year, but houses not yet constructed. To the east, Euharlee Hills Subdivisions is contemporaneous with Etowah Subdivision. By 1981, both were nearly fully developed. Also visible in 1981 is the new concrete bridge erected to reroute traffic away from the Covered Bridge and Milam Bridge.

Between 1981 and 1993, substantial residential development is evident, encroaching the historic downtown of Euharlee from the east. As illustrated in the 1993 aerial photograph, five large-scale subdivisions were undergoing development that year, all planned and laid out c.1990. Within the downtown district, an approximate 10-acre tract of pasture and woodland north of Burge's/Lowry Mill and the covered bridge was acquired by the City by the late-1980s for use as a public park. By 1993, the park consisted of an athletic field and tennis courts. In 2007, further residential subdivisions north and west of downtown Euharlee absorbed further agricultural land. Along Euharlee Road, passing north of the downtown district, the sprawling campuses of Euharlee Elementary School and Woodland Middle School were built. Along Euharlee Five Forks Road, extending west from the downtown district, was developing as a residential corridor with large wooded lots where houses enjoy deep setbacks. Beginning in 2012, a large municipal recreational park was underway on the north side of Euharlee Five Forks Road, connecting to Burge's Mill Road and the City Hall property.

Despite the extensive development encroaching upon downtown Euharlee, much of the land along Hardin Bridge Road to the west continues to reflect a rural, agricultural landscape with cleared fields, pasture and woodlands.<sup>27</sup>

Apparent by the close of the 20th century, continued suburbanization was inevitable. A 1998 article in the Atlanta Journal Constitution confirms “Euharlee is burgeoning, just like many small towns in the metro area.”<sup>28</sup> The same article acknowledges the large acreage of remaining farmland in the surrounding area that was affordable for developers to plan “starter-home” subdivisions, and the instrumental role that preservation plays to protect the historic resources in downtown and preserve the quaintness that draws new residents and visitors alike. By the turn-of-the-21st century, the population of Euharlee had reached upwards of 3,800 residents, an unparalleled rise from the 65 reported in 1970.

By 2003, “driving down Euharlee Road into the city, rows of subdivisions line the side of the highway where pastures and farmland once held sway.”<sup>29</sup> Yet, despite the evolving landscape from an agricultural setting to one of residential suburbs, the heart of the city remained true to its past.<sup>30</sup> This was largely due to a supportive government and the establishment of the Euharlee Historic Preservation Commission in the 1970s. Such a municipal department was ahead of the times, established during a period when preservation was just taking off nationwide. The grassroots initiatives began early on to protect and preserve the historic built landscape of downtown, successfully encapsulating the historic village in time, including its significant resources and picturesque setting.

The continued preservation of the downtown district, coupled with the natural landscape and waterways, has contributed substantially to attracting new residents wanting a tranquil environment in which to live, outside of the big city and sprawling suburbs. Preservation initiatives have also encouraged heritage tourism. The southeast end of the historic district, along the Euharlee Creek, is the core of the district including the ruins of the mill, the covered bridge, and a small collection of historic buildings that convey the agricultural heritage of the community. When the new public library was erected c.2007 just to the north, and on the west side of Covered Bridge Road, the City relocated some historic agricultural buildings to this area. Collectively, this enclave of the historic district acts as an outdoor museum in the heart of Euharlee.

Photograph 8. View of Etowah River in Euharlee, 2024

Kayaking is another draw to Euharlee in recent years and the former Lowry Blacksmith Shop now operates as an outfitter, offering kayak trips down the river. Most recently, the City established the Euharlee Creek Campground at Frankie Harris Park, behind the new public library. The campground maintains a natural, wooded setting and offers a further draw for heritage tourism, naturalists, and water enthusiasts. The future of Euharlee is certainly promising, and balancing the needs of preservation with tourism and continued residential growth is paramount to ensure the continuity of this small gem in northwest Georgia.

SECTION 4. SURVEY METHODOLOGY

The Phase I Euharlee Community-Wide survey documented the entirety of the six study areas that the City identified at the start of the project. In an effort to ensure that approximately 155 properties 45 years of age or older were surveyed, Impact7G also identified a small number of additional resources within the city limits to document. The field survey of the study area east of the Etowah River (East Euharlee Suburb Survey Area) was conducted in July 2023 by Architectural Historian, Casey Radke. The following month, Senior Architectural Historian with Impact7G, Jaime Destefano met locally with Katie Gobbi, the City's Community Development Director. The two toured the historic district, discussing the impressive history of Euharlee and its extant resources. Following the visit with Ms. Gobbi, Impact7G completed the survey of the remaining five (5) pre-defined sections for intensive study. Upon returning to the office and processing the field data, it was determined that the total number of resources that are 45 years of age or older within the six study areas was less than 155. In January of 2024, Jaime Destefano returned to Euharlee and conducted a windshield survey along accessible roads to identify additional historic resources outside of the boundaries of the six study areas and within the city limits that warranted survey. Fieldwork was conducted in accordance with the GA HPD survey guidelines.

Impact7G recorded a total of 228 properties within the city. Among those, a total of 20 GNAHRGIS entries were updated, including 5 that are no longer extant. A total of 84 documented properties within the six study areas are less than 40 years of age and, thus, not surveyed. In addition to the 20 existing GNAHRGIS entries, an additional 124 GNAHRGIS records were newly created (total of 144 GNAHRGIS entries associated with this survey).

The date of construction of all properties within the survey area was determined through a review of Bartow County property records, historic aerial photographs, and through an analysis of architectural type, style and materials. Unless physical obstructions were present, three photographs were captured of each resource. When visible from the public right-of-way, additional photographs were taken of outbuildings and unique landscape features.

Following the field survey, Impact7G developed a detailed inventory of all resources (regardless of age) within the six sections, or neighborhoods, for intensive study. In doing so, the inventory captures a complete and up-to-date tool for analysis of each study area that includes both historic and non-historic resources, as well as the vacant lots that might be considered for redevelopment in the future.

Surveyed properties located outside of the pre-defined study areas are also included on the inventory. The inventory, presented on an Excel spreadsheet, contains pertinent information that can prove beneficial towards future planning efforts. The spreadsheet includes data such as the assigned GNAHRGIS ID number (if applicable), address, parcel number, historic name (if known), date of construction, historic function, building type/form, architectural style, current exterior integrity, recommendations for the NRHP, and a thumbnail photograph for easy reference. The survey inventory is included in Appendix C. A Microsoft Excel file of the inventory supplements this report for use by city planners in their future preservation initiatives.

Impact7G entered survey data into GNAHRGIS for all properties identified as being 40 years of age or older (built prior to 1984). Impact7G first began by updating the existing 20 records previously created in GNAHRGIS with addresses and/or mapped locations within the survey area. The mapped locations for all previously entered properties were corrected in GNAHRGIS and the survey data updated accordingly based on current fieldwork. Five (5) of the resources previously recorded in GNAHRGIS were confirmed no longer extant (GNAHRGIS 1535, 1555, 1556, 1559, and 1870).

In addition to the 20 previously recorded properties, throughout July of 2023 and January 2024, a total of 123 new GNAHRGIS records were created for all remaining properties built prior to 1984. For each surveyed resource, a minimum of three photographs were uploaded into the GNAHRGIS record. The following section documents the results of the survey. Recommendations for future preservation initiatives are presented in Section 6 of this document.

SECTION 5. SURVEY RESULTS AND ARCHITECTURAL ANALYSIS

The Phase I community-wide survey documented a total of 223 resources ranging in date from c.1830 to 2023. Among those, a total of 84, or approximately 38 percent (38%), are less than 40 years of age and not entered into GNAHRGIS. Impact7G identified 20 resources that were previously entered into GNAHRGIS (Table 1). Based on the desktop review and fieldwork, Impact7G confirmed that 5 of the previously entered resources are demolished and updated as such in GNAHRGIS. A total of 124 new records were created, and the existing 20 records updated in GNAHRGIS (total 144 GNAHRGIS entries tied to this survey). In total, 139 extant resources built on or prior to 1983 were surveyed during this study.

Of the 139 surveyed properties, residential architecture predominates with a total of 111 resources documented (~80%). Most of the residential resources occur in the East Suburb study area, which contains the highest concentration of resources within planned residential subdivisions. Additional resources occurring within the city include historic commercial buildings, public buildings, churches, cemeteries, barns, mill ruins, and bridges, among others. Table 2 is a breakdown of the 139 extant surveyed properties by historic function, or resource type.

With exception to the residential, religious, and public buildings, historic resources are primarily distinguished by their function rather than a distinct architectural form or style. Table 3 breaks down surveyed historic resources by distinct building form, if applicable, and Figure 9 reflects the various architectural styles that occur within the city limits of Euharlee.

As the Phase I community-wide survey is multifaceted with six pre-defined sections for intensive study, the following sub-chapters provide an analysis for each, as well as the resources surveyed beyond these areas. Each of the six concentrated study areas conveys distinctive characteristics, resource and overall setting.

5.1 Downtown Euharlee

The Downtown Euharlee grouping of resources encompasses the entirety of the local historic district (Figure 10). This section includes a total of 35 resources along Covered Bridge Road/Euharlee Road, only 2 of which post-date 1984. These include the old public library, built in 1988; and the new public library erected in 2010. The downtown section is the most intact and well-preserved collection of resources documenting the history of the community since the 1830s. The majority of these resources are located within the locally designated downtown historic district.

5.1.1 Dates of Construction

Resources within the downtown section range in date from 1818 through 2007. The following chart is a breakdown of the total of 47 resources within the downtown area by approximate date of construction. The numbers presented in the chart reflect all extant resources. It does not account for the buildings that were razed over time. For example, many of the earliest buildings erected within downtown may have been razed and replaced with more permanent edifices. The chart reveals that the majority of the resources within this study area pre-date the Civil War and are attributed to the early white settlement of the community. Many of these resources are included as part of a historic district tour of Euharlee.

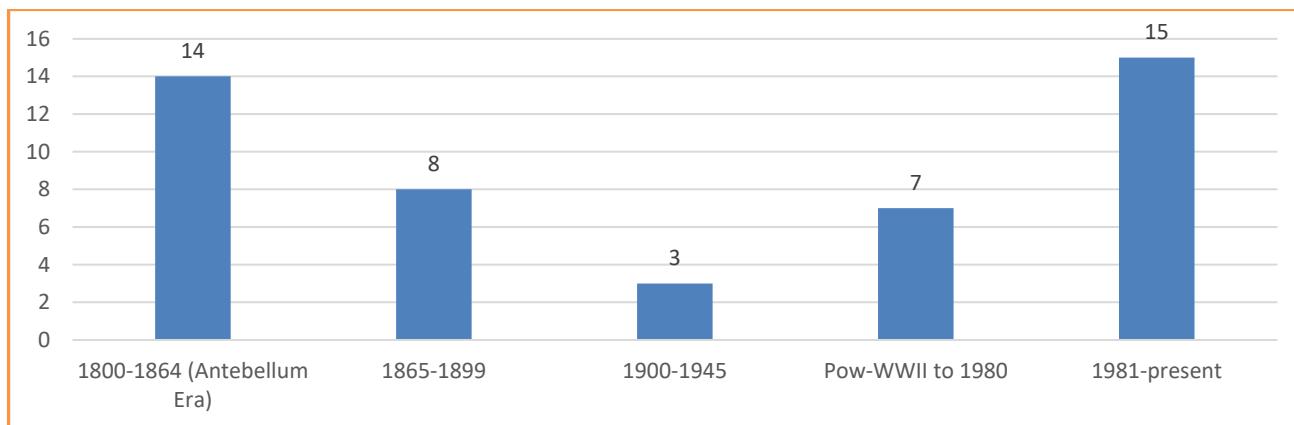

Table 4. Breakdown of 47 Resources (37 surveyed) within the Downtown Euharlee Section

The earliest resource from the initial settlement of Euharlee is the cemetery of the Euharlee Baptist Church (GNAHRGIS 290474), formerly the Mt. Paran Baptist Church. The cemetery includes 2 burial markers dating to 1818 – Mary C. Burge and infant, Joseph Green Pearce. Traditional history states that the Burges family did not arrive to the area until the 1830s. However, it is unclear whether the burial of Mary C. Burge occurred in 1818 or was a reinternment after her family settled here. The burial ground of former enslaved peoples, now known as the Black Pioneer Cemetery (GNAHRGIS 290464) is believed to have been established in the 1850s, with burials continuing through the early-20th century.

The old Traveler's Well (GNAHRGIS 289095) was dug by early settlers to serve those traveling along the old wagon road that passed Burge's Mill in the 1830s. The ruin of the mill, which was the impetus of the settlement of the community, survives within the district (GNAHRGIS 289079). Additional resources from the Antebellum years of Euharlee include the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches, dating to 1852 and 1853, respectively (GNAHRGIS 1557 and 1554). Known internments in the Presbyterian Church cemetery (GNAHRGIS 290456) begin in the 1850s. Known as the Miller's House (GNAHRGIS 289096), the c.1850 dwelling was occupied by the grist mill operator. The Commissary (GNAHRGIS 290515) and Granary (GNAHRGIS 290539) are believed to date to 1860s.

Photograph 10. Burges Mill (GNAHRGIS 289079)

Photograph 11. Burges Mill (GNAHRGIS 289079)

Relocated to the historic district from the Lowry Farm is a c.1850s cow shed (GNAHRGIS 289097) and a storage building or smokehouse (GNAHRGIS 290540). One of six known iron saltpepper kettles used during the Civil War is housed in the historic district, encased by a c.2015 small frame shed (GNAHRGIS 290541).

Photograph 12. Cow Pen (GNAHRGIS 289097)

During the Civil War, Euharlee's population plunged, growth having come to a near halt. This trend continued through Reconstruction years. The arrival of the Lowry's after the War, and their subsequent acquisition of the Burge's Mill and considerable land acreage, helped to sustain the small enclave as a social, religious and commercial center for the surrounding agricultural region. At the north end of the local historic district, (2) residences date to c.1870 - the Dr. McGowan House and Office (GNAHRGIS 1552) and the nearby dwelling at 94 Covered Bridge Road (GNAHRGIS 1558). The first Militia Courthouse #851 is believed to have been rebuilt in the late-19th century (GNAHRGIS 1548). Also built in the late-1800s and adjacent to the courthouse is a calaboose (GNAHRGIS 289094), a small jail to detain local vagrants. The Euharlee Covered Bridge, also known as Lowry Bridge, was built in 1886 across Euharlee Creek (GNAHRGIS 1547). Table 3 lists the significant historic resources within the downtown core of the historic district that are documented as part of a walking tour.<sup>31</sup>

Additional early-20th century resources within the Downtown Survey Area include the Masonic Lodge (GNAHRGIS 1561), a New South cottage at 24 Covered Bridge Road (GNAHRGIS 1553), and barns associated with the Dr. McGowan farmstead (GNAHRGIS 290421). Post-World War II development within the survey area include 3 residences, all adopting a ranch house form, the former Euharlee Elementary School (GNAHRGIS 290416) in 1952, and the old library built in 1988. Adjacent to the Burge's Mill, a new library was built in 2007.

5.1.2 Architectural Distinction of the Downtown Euharlee

Photograph 13. Militia District Courthouse (GNAHRGIS 1548)

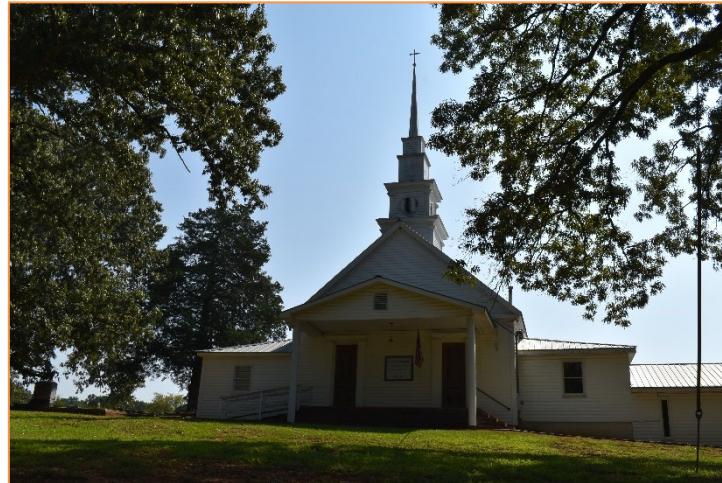

Photograph 14. Commissary (GNAHRGIS 290515)

Most of the buildings within the Downtown study area are distinguished more so by their function, or use, rather than a distinguishing architectural form or style. This is particularly the case for the agricultural buildings and resources not classified as a building such as the bridge and well. The burial grounds of the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches possess a variety of marker types including traditional headstones, ledger stones, obelisks, and box tombs, among others. The cemeteries also feature a variety of motifs such as lamb, dove, Bibles, pointing fingers, Crown, and Gates of Heaven, along with numerous others. Both are exemplary illustrations of church graveyards spanning the 19th through the 20th centuries. The lack of burial markers in the Black Pioneer Cemetery is typical of black cemeteries in the southeast during the years of slavery.

Architecturally notable resources within the downtown area of Euharlee include the courthouse and calaboose, both simple, single-pen buildings, yet rare in the area. The c.1860s commissary, granary, and mercantile are all wood frame construction, typical of free-standing commercial buildings found in rural crossroads communities.

The original massing of the Baptist and Presbyterian Church are reflective of antebellum-era rural churches. Both adopt a traditional front-gabled form and draw upon elements of the Greek Revival style. Greek Revival (c.1835-1870) dominated the newly independent United States through much of the first half of the 19th century. The style evoked architectural precedents of the Greek democracy thought to be appropriate for the new American republic. Similar in overall form and symmetry as the Federal style, Greek Revival architecture is most often recognized by a low-pitched roof, wide band of trim emphasizing the cornice or porch roof; and prominent entry porches or full-width porticos supported by columns typically of the Doric style. The front door surround most often features sidelights and a rectangular transom.<sup>33</sup>

Photograph 17. Former Euharlee Elementary School (GNAHRGIS 290416)

In 1952, another community institution was erected in downtown. The Euharlee Elementary School (GNAHRGIS 290416) replaced the former Presbyterian Institute on a hilltop on Burges Mill Road. The sprawling 1-story building adopts the International Style of Modernist architecture that was very popular nationwide in the post-World War II years. The International Style has its roots in European Modernism that first emerged in the 1920s. European Modernism was heralded as a movement towards rationality in architecture, rather than stylistic embellishment. This movement evolved into what came to be known as the International style. Following World War II, the International style evolved into a broader modern movement emphasizing technology and expression of construction methods, materials, exposed structural elements, and simplicity of form. The style was highly popular through the late-1950s. Although the style was evident well beyond the 1950s, many critics felt that the International Style was bland, monotonous, and cold.<sup>34</sup> Identifying features of the International style in Modernist design include the use of modern materials such as concrete, glass, and steel; rejection of non-essential decoration; ribbon windows and glass curtain walls; and flat roofs. International Style architecture in Euharlee is rare. The former Euharlee Elementary School (presently City Hall) is the only known example of the style.

Photograph 19. Miller's House (GNAHRGIS 289096)

Ten resources within the Downtown Section are residential, ranging in date from c.1850 to 1881. The earliest is the Miller's House (GNAHRGIS 289096) which is an excellent example of a central hall house with Greek Revival stylistic influences. The Central Hallway (1830-1930) house was prominent throughout the 19th- and early-20th centuries in Georgia. It is distinguished by a central hallway or passageway between two rooms. Thus, it is generally only one room deep. It frequently features a side-gabled roof with exterior end chimneys on both ends. The central hallway dwelling is evenly distributed throughout the state.<sup>35</sup> Two additional dwellings adopt a central hall plan as well as Greek Revival stylistic influences. These include houses located at 94 and 96 Covered Bridge Road, erected c.1870 and c.1895, respectively (GNAHRGIS 1558 and 1560).

At the north end of the historic district, and within the Downtown Survey Area, is the c.1870 residence and office of Dr. McGowan. The house enjoys a deep setback within a small farmstead. Two small barns are located north of the residence, though the farm is no longer operating.<sup>36</sup> The house features an off-centered entry suggesting that it adopts a hall-parlor plan and has a rear ell wing. The hall-parlor (popular late-19th-early-20th century) house form typically consists of two unequal rooms, where the entry is into the larger of the two rooms. It is usually gabled. It was adaptable and expandable and popular for farm owners, tenant farmers and mill workers alike.

with the wall of the main mass.<sup>38</sup> The residence at 24 Covered Bridge Road (GNAHRGIS 1553) is exemplifies the New South Cottage with its two front-facing gables and high-pitched hipped roof. Like its neighbor, the Dr. McGowan House, this dwelling enjoys a deep setback within an expansive lot surrounded by mature trees.

Ranch House (1940-1960s). Although originating in the mid-1930s in southern California, the ranch house gained in popularity following World War II, becoming by far the most popular house type in the United States.<sup>39</sup> The size of the 1940s ranch house was quite small, but gradually increased through the 1950s and 1960s. The traditional ranch house is one-story, long and low, with a low-pitched roof. Roofs tend to feature wide overhanging eaves. The front entry door is most often off centered on the façade and sheltered under the main roof. Garages were typically attached to the main façade. Large picture windows are also common.<sup>40</sup> Four residences within Downtown are Ranch houses and range in date from c.1960 to 1983.

New South Cottage (1890-1920). The New South Cottage name is derived from the 20th century period of great economic growth and regional confidence. The house form was most popular between the 1890s and 1920's for middle and upper-middle-class Georgians.<sup>37</sup> The New South has a central square massing and typically has a hipped roof and gabled projections. The New South Cottage exhibits a degree of symmetry and often features a pair of gables along the façade that project or are flush

5.2 East Euharlee Residential Suburb Area

East of downtown Euharlee is the largest of the six pre-defined sections by the City at the onset of this study. This area is largely residential and includes two planned mid-20th century subdivisions, a scattering of earlier historic dwellings set within expansive lots once part of larger farmsteads. The East Euharlee Residential Suburb Area is bordered to the north by Euharlee Road and to the south by the Etowah River. Milam Bridge Road travels through the residential area, extending from the south side of Euharlee Road and meandering southwest to cross the historic Milam Bridge. The route is the historic wagon trail that crossed the river toward Euharlee where it continued through the Covered Bridge over Euharlee Creek. On the south side of the Milam Bridge Road, expansive fields extending south to the river are reminiscent of the agricultural past that once characterized this area. Figure 10 is the survey map of this study area with associated GNAHRGIS IDs keyed to the respective surveyed resource.

The East Euharlee Residential Area encompasses a total of 152 parcels, three of which are vacant lots. Of the 149 resources documented within the survey area, sixty are less than 40 years of age and were not surveyed. The remaining 89 properties were surveyed and entered into GNAHRGIS. One of the surveyed properties was previously documented with existing GNAHGRIS records (1539), which was updated.

Two planned subdivisions are within this study area. Extending north from Milam Bridge Road along Dobson Drive is the Etowah Subdivision, platted in 1971. The neighborhood includes 37 residences, with only seven built after 1984. To the east is the Euharlee Hills Subdivision, which is contemporaneous with the Etowah Subdivision. It is comprised of 88 residences, including 33 (approximately 38%) that are less than 40 years of age. An analysis of the two subdivisions was conducted to determine potential NRHP eligibility as a historic district. The analysis is presented in this report. Outside of the two planned subdivisions, an additional 27 resources were recorded within the East Euharlee Residential Area. Of those, only 7 were built prior to 1984 and entered into GNAHRGIS.

5.2.1 Dates of Construction

Table 6. Breakdown of Resources within East Euharlee Residential Suburb Area by Dates of Construction

Only a small number of resources in the East Euharlee Residential Suburb Area were erected prior to the development of the planned subdivisions. The earliest was built in 1917 at 99 Milam Bridge Road (GNAHRGIS 1539) and is the only previously surveyed property within the survey area. Two were built in 1940 – a house located at 833 Euharlee Road (GNAHRGIS 289074) and a barn (GNAHRGIS 288523) at 201 Milam Bridge Road. The latter is converted into a residence. Three houses were built in the 1960s along Milam Bridge Road as agricultural land began to subdivide. The area saw the greatest period of development in the 1970s, coinciding with the development of Etowah Subdivision and Euharlee Hills. The following section documents the historic residential architecture occurring in this study area.

5.2.2 Residential Forms, or Types

All surveyed historic resources within the East Euharlee Residential Suburb Area are single-family dwellings, including a converted barn. Most of the residences are wood frame construction, many with brick veneer exteriors. The vast majority of historic residences are one-story, though several split-level and two-story houses are located within one of the two planned subdivisions. Commonly occurring alterations to the exterior of the historic residences include the application of vinyl, replacement windows and doors, garage enclosures, and rear additions. Paved or concrete driveways are common. While most of the residences have attached garages, open carports and detached frame garages also occur. Streets within the subdivisions convey consistency in setback, scale and landscaping. While the residences located outside of the planned neighborhoods tend to have random setback and landscaping. Three house forms occur within the survey area. These include two bungalows and 80 ranch houses. The latter includes representations of a variety of sub-types of the ranch house form.

Table 7. Residential Types and Architectural Styles in the East Euharlee Residential Suburb

Represented House	Total # of Resources	Represented Architectural	Total # of Resources
Bungalow	2	Colonial	14
Ranch House	80	Craftsman	2
Split Level	1	Plain Style	55
No Defined Form	6	No Style	18

Bungalow (1910-1930). The bungalow house type first emerged in southern California in the 1890s and provided an affordable house for families with no servants. They were often sold by catalog and are among the first mass-produced houses in the United States.<sup>41</sup> By 1910, the bungalow was among the most popular house types nationwide. It is generally a one- or one-and-one-half-story house with a low-pitched roof that features overhanging eaves. The house type features an open floor plan at the front of the house and private bedrooms at the rear or upstairs. A prominent front porch is one of the most distinctive elements of the bungalow form. The Craftsman style is overwhelmingly associated with the bungalow house form. Two bungalows are within the East Euharlee Suburb area. The house form is best represented by the house located at 99 Milam Bridge Road (GNAHRGIS 1539), erected in 1917.

Photograph 23. 99 Milam Bridge Road (GNAHRGIS 1539)

The East Euharlee Residential Suburb Area is overwhelming characterized by the many ranch houses lining the residential streets. The Georgia ranch house is classified into sub-types, or sub-forms. Among the sub-types occurring in the survey area are half-courtyard, linear, and linear with clusters.<sup>42</sup> The linear ranch houses are the simplest variations. The linear ranch house is by far the most frequently occurring within the survey area. It is rectangular in form with three or more rooms in width and generally two rooms deep. Linear with clusters have a rectangular principal massing with small projecting bays, most frequently with a lower roof line. The half-courtyard ranch house has a perpendicular wing that creates a L-shape with a partial courtyard. The courtyard may occur in the front, rear or to the side of the residence. In the Etowah Subdivision, a good example of a linear ranch house is the residence located at 45 Dobson Drive (GNAHRGIS 288500). It is also a good illustration demonstrating how many of the residences in both subdivisions enclose garages to create more interior space. In Euharlee Hills, the house located at 41 Lois Road (GNAHRGIS 288866) is a typical representation of a linear ranch house. A linear-with-clusters ranch house in Euharlee Hills is the house located at 31 Lois Road (GNARHGIS 288864). Of the four half-courtyard ranch houses, all are distinguished by rear ell wings and not captured from the public right-of-way. In addition to traditional ranch houses, this survey area includes one example of a split-level residence, which is oftentimes considered a sub-type of the ranch house. The split-level house consists of three levels, two of them stacked and the third to one side, between the two stacked layers. The house located at 55 Lois Road (GNAHRGIS 288872) in Euharlee Hills is a good representation of a typical split-level house.

5.2.3 Architectural Styles Occurring in the East Euharlee Residential Suburb Area

The majority of the residences within the study area lacks stylistic embellishment. Among the few styles represented include Craftsman, Colonial Revival and Plain Style Ranch.

Craftsman Style (c1905-1930). The Craftsman style is among the most popular architectural styles in the United States of American origin. Character-defining elements of the style include a low-pitched, hipped or gable roof with exposed rafter ends, and prominent battered, or tapered, columns on masonry piers applied to large front porches. Gable ends often feature decorative brackets and half-timbering. Typical windows consist of a multi-pane upper sash (commonly vertical panes) and a single-pane lower sash.<sup>43</sup> The style was largely made popular by print media such as magazines and mail order catalogs. The style is most associated with the bungalow house form on which it is often applied.

Because the East Euharlee survey area is dominated by ranch houses, the Craftsman style is rare. Both bungalows draw upon the Craftsman style (Photograph 23).

Colonial Revival Style (c.1880-1955). The Colonial Revival movement reflects architecture's return to classicism but generally is applied to smaller more vernacular residential buildings. Houses reflecting this style are most often side-gabled with symmetrical facades. Entry doors are usually accented by a decorative crown or pediment supported by pilasters. Fanlights and sidelights are common, as are double-hung sash windows with multi-pane glazing.<sup>44</sup> Colonial Revival is frequently applied to a variety of house forms including modest vernacular dwellings, to grand American Foursquare houses, bungalows, American Small Houses and Ranch Houses, and others. Fourteen residences within the East Euharlee survey area draw upon the Colonial Revival style. A fine example of a Colonial Revival ranch house is the residence located at 31 Lois Road (GNARHGIS 288864) in Euharlee Hills (Photograph 25).

Plain Style (c.1935-1975). This style applies exclusively to split-level and ranch houses. As defined in The Ranch Houses in Georgia: Guidelines for Evaluation, this style generally lacks stylistic detailing. Distinguishing features include brick veneer exteriors or synthetic siding, low-pitched hip or gable roofs, and modest exterior decoration. They may possess attached or integral carports or garages. Within the survey area, fifty-four (54) residences within the survey area are classified as Plain Style, such as the residence located at 107 Dobson Drive (GNAHRGIS 288522).

Photograph 28. 107 Dobson Drive (GNAHRGIS 288522) in Etowah Subdivision

5.2.4 Overview of Etowah Subdivision and Euharlee Hills

The two planned subdivisions within the East Euharlee Residential Suburb Area developed in the 1970s. The Etowah Subdivision comprises a single straight street leading north from Milam Bridge Road. It is characterized by traditional linear ranch houses set within large, grassed yards. There is consistency in setback and scale of the residences. Dobson Road lacks curbing or sidewalks. Though, a section of the street is lined by mature shade trees. The neighborhood includes 7 residences that are less than 40 years of age, and a high percentage of the houses reveal vinyl cladding and enclosed garages.

The Euharlee Hills subdivision is characterized by its curvilinear interior street layout and abundance of shade trees. The streets throughout lack curbing or sidewalks. Houses appear to enjoy a deeper setback within slightly larger yards than those in the Etowah Subdivision. Residential landscaping is relatively simple with grassed yards and hedges along the foundation of the house. Many residences within the neighborhood reveal similar exterior alterations as those occurring in the Etowah Subdivision.

Photograph 29. Streetscape along Dobson Road in Etowah Subdivision

Photograph 30. Streetscape along Linda Road in Euharlee Hills

5.3 Section 3 Study Area

The Section 3 study area comprises four parcels of land on the south side of Euharlee Road, adjacent to the west of the Etowah River. The parcels are heavily wooded. The northeastern parcel (Parcel ID 0034-0678-003) is entirely wooded with no built features. The northwestern parcel (0034-0678-002) contains a residence built in 1991 and was therefore not surveyed or entered into GNAHRGIS. The remaining two parcels contain three residences erected in c.1983. The residences are accessed by a dirt and gravel drive extending from the south side of Euharlee Road and meandering through the property. A scattering of various outbuildings are sited along the drive. The three residences are all manufactured homes (GNAHRGIS 290519, 290521 and 290522). Figure 12 is a map of Section 3 showing its boundary, parcels and location of resources recorded in GNAHRGIS.

5.4 Section 4

The Section 4 study area is a historically agricultural area along the north side of Cliff Nelson Road (Figure 13). The few lots comprising this study area are deep parcels with grassed yards and fields. Shade trees line some of the property boundaries and driveways. A previously surveyed resource (GNAHRGS 1870) was confirmed no longer extant, having been replaced with a modern residence. contains five documented buildings. Four additional resources within Section 4 include three that are less than 40 years of age. Only one building within this study area was surveyed – the New Corinth Missionary Baptist Church (GNAHRGIS 290417), built in 1958. The front-gabled church with steeple began extensive remodeling in 1976. New pews were added in 1979, and in 1984 restrooms were added, followed by new exterior siding (vinyl) in 1987.

5.4 Sections 5 and 6

Section 5 comprises land surrounding the east and west intersection of Euharlee Road and Cliff Nelson Road (Figure 14). This area is largely agricultural with cleared fields on the west and timberland on the east of Euharlee Road. At the northeast end of the study area was a previously surveyed property (GNAHRGIS 1535) that was razed and replaced with large modern residence. The residence located at 1192 Euharlee Road was built in 2020. Only one extant historic resource within this study area was entered into GNAHRGIS. Built c. 1920 at 1235 Euharlee Road (GNAHRGIS 290423) is a side-gabled farmhouse with vinyl siding and a prominent gabled porch. The house is sited within a homesite setback within an expansive agricultural field and pasture. The homesite also features a garage and barn and shed.

Section 6 (see Figure 14) comprises two residential lots on the east side of Euharlee Road that were once part of a larger farmstead which was subdivided following World War II. Built c.1960, the house located at 1350 Euharlee Road (GNAHRGIS 290538) is a good representation of a plain-style ranch. The house located at 1364 Euharlee Road (GNAHRGIS 291249) dates to 1972 and is a fine example of a Colonial Revival ranch house with a raised basement

5.5 Additional Surveyed Resources

Photograph 38. Hardin Bridge (GNAHRGIS 1702) at Robert's Mill

Impact7G identified 9 properties outside of the boundaries of the six pre-defined areas of the city. Among those include three that were previously surveyed (GNAHRGIS 1536, 1540, and 1702). Figure 15 shows the distribution of these resources labeled with the assigned GNAHRGIS ID. The 9 properties include two historic truss bridges, a mill ruin, and single-family residences. Hardin Bridge (GNAHRGIS 1702) was erected in 1903, replacing an earlier covered bridge crossing Euharlee Creek at Robert's Mill (present Tilley Mill). It was partially restored in 2004. Milam's Bridge (GNAHRGIS 1540) crossing the Etowah River was built in 1912.<sup>45</sup> A bridge was here prior to the Civil War before being destroyed by a retreating Confederate army. From 1864 to 1912, a ferry operated here in lieu of the bridge.

Photograph 39. Ruins of Robert's Mills (GNAHRGIS 290548)

Formerly Robert's Mill (GNAHRGIS 290548), the stone foundation mill was built in 1848. It reportedly later became Gillem & Barrett Mill and is now known as Tilley Mill. It is unclear when the mill ceased operations, though its ruin is reminiscent of the early settlement of region and the water-powered mills that took advantage of the waterways.

The remaining six resources that are within the city-wide survey area are all single-family residential and range in date from c.1905 to 1978. These include a New South Cottage erected c.1905 at 101 Cliff Nelson Road (GNAHRGIS 290516), and a central hall dwelling at 13 Bill Nelson Road (GNAHRGIS 1536).<sup>46</sup> In c.1930, a gabled wing (gabled ell) dwelling was built at 1244 Euharlee Road (GNAHRGIS 290528). Also abandoned, this house is threatened by demolition. The three remaining residences date to the 1960s and 1970s and adopt a ranch house form.

5.6 Integrity

The National Register of Historic Places recognizes a property's integrity through seven aspects, or qualities: location, design, setting, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association. Properties individually eligible for listing in the National Register must retain sufficient integrity to convey the period of time in which they are significant. To retain historic integrity, a property will always possess several, and usually most, of the seven aspects. The retention of specific aspects of integrity is essential for it to properly convey its significance.<sup>47</sup> The National Park Service defines each quality of integrity as follows:

Seven Qualities of Integrity

- Location – the place where the historic property was constructed or the place where the historic event took place
- Design – the composition of elements that constitute the form, plan, space, structure, and style of a property
- Setting – the physical environment of a historic property that illustrates the character of the place
- Materials – the physical elements combined during a particular period of time and in a particular pattern or configuration to form a historic property
- Workmanship – the physical evidence of the crafts of a particular culture or people during any given period in history or prehistory

An objective of this survey is not only to identify and document historic resources within the city limits, but to assess their degree of integrity. In doing so, preliminary recommendations for National Register eligibility is possible. Based on field observations and an understanding of evolving methods of construction and materials, the following ratings were used to convey the degree of historic integrity of each resource. Most often, the evaluation of a resource's integrity is subjective. Impact7G took into consideration whether exterior alterations were reversible. For example, if vinyl siding was applied over original weatherboard without altering character-defining design elements (window and door surrounds, stylistic details, etc.), the vinyl siding might be removed, and the historic integrity of the resource restored. This is considered a “reversible” modification. Similarly, buildings must be maintained, often requiring the replacement of materials and design elements. Impact7G considered whether exterior alterations are in kind - sharing similar material, methods of construction, and stylistic elements, which would retain the historic qualities of the resource and neighborhood. The following criteria was taken into consideration when rating the integrity of an individual resource.

Good – the building would be a contributing element to a historic district if the original form and massing are intact, and also if:

- The majority of the exterior cladding is intact
- Minor alterations to building openings or spaces has occurred using new material, but not resulting in irreversible damage to original fenestrations
- Character-defining decorative elements are intact
- Reversible alterations, such as vinyl siding over weatherboard, are reversible and the historic character of the property is easily restored
- Minor additions to side or rear elevations are in an appropriate and do not detract from the overall character and design of the building

Moderate – if restored in conformance with the Secretary of Interior’s Standards for Rehabilitation, and the property might be a contributing resource to a historic district if:

- The original form and massing are intact
- Exterior cladding has been altered or added; however, the application of new siding is reversible to reveal original cladding underneath
- Alterations to building openings altered profiles, sizes, and materials of the original Openings
- Minor loss of important decorative elements, including porches
- Additions are sensitive to the original design
- Historic feeling, or character, of the building is compromised, but may be restored

Low – the property would be considered a noncontributing element to a historic district if:

- Form and massing are altered
- Exterior materials and cladding are altered
- Decorative elements removed
- Irreversible alterations to exterior cladding and openings
- Incompatible additions
- Loss of overall historic feeling or character

Based on field observations from the public right-of-way, among the 139 extant historic resources that were surveyed as part of this study, a total of 11 are given an integrity rating of low, fifty with moderate integrity, and 75 with good integrity. Two resources, the former mills are rated as “ruin” though they possess significance as agricultural sites. One resource, a residence located at 40 Euharlee Five Forks Road (GNAHRGIS 290418) was inaccessible and its integrity not assessed.

Downtown Integrity

The field survey identified three primary “character areas” or distinct grouping of historic resources. These include the downtown Euharlee, which is a locally designated historic district, Euharlee Hills Subdivision, and the Etowah Subdivision. The integrity of resources within each is important to evaluate them as a potentially eligible National Register district. Within the downtown district, not to be confused with the Downtown Survey Area, are thirty documented resources. Only 2 of those are less than 40 years of age (the two libraries). Seventeen (17) resources have good integrity, and an additional 9 have moderate integrity. These would all be considered contributing resources to a potential historic district. Though the Burge’s Mill is a ruin, it has good integrity from an archaeological standpoint. Therefore, twenty-seven (27) of the 30 resources within the district would be recognized as contributing elements.

Etowah Subdivision Integrity

The Etowah Subdivision comprises 34 residential properties, including 7 that are less than 40 years of age. In considering the National Register general age requirement of 50 years, the neighborhood possesses a total of 20 resources that are less than 50 years of age. Of the 14 resources constructed prior to 1975, only one has low integrity.

Euharlee Hills Subdivision Integrity

The Euharlee Hills subdivision comprises 88 resources, including 65 that are less than 50 years of age (33 are less than 40 years of age) and would be recognized as noncontributing. Of the remaining 23 residences, three have low integrity ratings. Therefore, the neighborhood contains 68 resources that would be classified as noncontributing to a potential historic district. This high number accounts for approximately 77 percent of residences within the neighborhood.

SECTION 6. RECOMMENDATIONS FOR FUTURE PRESERVATION ACTIVITIES

Among the initiatives of the survey is to identify properties that may meet eligibility requirements for NRHP designation. For individual eligibility, a property must possess historical or architectural significance while also retaining a high degree of its historic integrity. Apart from resources with exceptional significance, the NRHP requires a property be 50 years of age or older. Only those resources with an integrity rating of 'good' were considered for potential eligibility and further study. The majority of those with a good integrity rating are ranch houses, which is a ubiquitous house form, occurring in high numbers throughout the state. The survey did not identify an exemplary illustration of a ranch house that would warrant further study. Further, Euharlee Hills and Etowah Subdivision lack sufficient integrity for designation on the NRHP and are among the many contemporaneous planned subdivisions in the county. Therefore, Impact7G recommends that both neighborhoods are ineligible for the NRHP.

The Euharlee Covered Bridge is listed on the NRHP and continues to retain both significance and integrity. Though the Euharlee Baptist and Presbyterian Churches are identified as "significant" to the Etowah Valley Historic District, both have extensive large-scale additions that detract from the original design of each church. Further alterations or additions should consider the remaining historic fabric, avoiding further loss where possible. Future additions, if any, should be appropriately scaled to not overshadow the historic massings.

The most intact resources possessing historical significance are those located within the locally designated Euharlee historic district. It is recommended that the City prepare a NRHP district nomination of the current historic district, specifying the integrity of each resource. NRHP designation will afford some additional benefits to property owners, including grant opportunities and rehabilitation tax credits. Individual designation of properties is held to a higher standard of significance and integrity, often requiring the interior to be well-preserved. As such, a historic district nomination would be the most inclusive and efficient toward NRHP designation.

This survey does not change the existing National Register nomination or listing in any way, including but not limited to: contributing/noncontributing status of properties, period of significance, boundaries, and/or additional documentation. Any amendments, additional information, increase or decrease of boundaries must be made through the formal National Register process outlined in 36 CFR 60, as amended.

A wide spectrum of historic resources within the district conveys its significance as a center of religious, social, and commercial life for the surrounding agricultural community. Historic bridges allowed for a network of wagon roads to access the various mills throughout the region that supported the farming community. At the heart of the district, the ruins of Burge's Mill sit in the shadow of the celebrated Euharlee Covered Bridge, erected by a prolific African American bridge builder. The free-standing frame agricultural and commercial buildings are reminiscent of the years when these edifices provided goods and services to area farmers. The modest courthouse and calaboose further convey the heritage of a rural community in northwest Georgia that endured the perils of the war, depression, and rapid suburbanization. Significant to the telling of the story of Euharlee, the Black Pioneer Cemetery survives as a reminder of the black experience in the region from the years of slavery through emancipation and years beyond. It is recommended that the boundary for the district be the same as the local designation. The Period of Significance spans c.1830 with the digging of the Traveler's Well to 1952 when the former Euharlee Elementary School was built. The district is eligible under Criterion A in the areas of commerce, agriculture, transportation, settlement, and ethnic heritage: black.

Suburbanization is rapidly encroaching upon the historic district and its tranquil natural and agricultural surroundings. It is recommended that the City of Euharlee consider a preservation overlay for the area layer immediately surrounding the historic district. Oversight should be given to proposed development plans within this area to ensure that new construction does not further impede upon the unique, picturesque setting of downtown Euharlee.

The City has made great strides in recent years to promote heritage tourism through the installation of interpretative signage and a pedestrian sidewalk, as well as the careful renovation of the many resources within the historic district. It is encouraged that the City, or local historical society, sponsor community-wide educational programs to promote preservation initiatives and an appreciation for Euharlee's unique architectural heritage and historical significance. Workshops to provide property owners with hands-on technical guidance for property restoration are strongly encouraged. These might include workshops for proper window restoration or cleaning treatments. Future rehabilitations of any historic building, whether in the historic district or beyond, should be based on the Secretary of Interior's Standards for Rehabilitation. Further, the National Park Service has numerous publications available as to best practices for restoring historic properties. Property owners should consult these publications to ensure proper maintenance and preservation of their historic property.

In recent years, digital technology has increasingly offered innovative methods to foster heritage tourism and to reach a greater audience. The City might consider establishing an interactive cellphone walking tour, or GIS-based StoryMap of the historic district, perhaps tying together both heritage river tourism.
